

"Today, individuals are required to take an increasing role in the direction of their finances and this University course will help them learn how to do just that. You can rest assured that participants will receive unbiased information covering the wide array of topics needed for a comprehensive financial plan."

— Cynthia Milligan, Dean
College of Business Administration
University of Nebraska–Lincoln

"We've offered three classes at First Nebraska Trust, and the feedback has been very positive. The Personal Financial Planning course provides easy to understand concepts and planning tools that help participants organize, plan and move forward financially."

— John Guenzel, President
First Nebraska Trust

UNL Business Seminars Announces 'Preparing for Retirement' Classes to be offered in 2007

The University of Nebraska–Lincoln is now offering Preparing for Retirement courses to local employers. This class focuses on the needs of employees who plan to retire within the next 1-3 years, and may be customized to a specific group or situation. It is offered at the employer's place of business, making it easy to attend. This class is $69, and includes all materials and 4½ to 5 hours of class instruction by qualified instructors.

Personal Financial Planning courses have been provided to 100's of employees across the state and the evaluations have been overwhelmingly positive. Students learn about finances in a classroom environment without soliciting or specific product emphasis. Courses are taught by Certified Financial Educators who have been trained by the Heartland Institute of Financial Education (HIFE). Through this partnership, UNL and the College of Business are assisting businesses to meet the requirements of the 2006 Pension Protection Act which requires employers to provide basic financial education to their retirement plan participants.

Both courses, Personal Financial Planning and Preparing for Retirement, are available for delivery on-site at your business or organization. Open enrollment courses are offered occasionally based on community interest.
